GENERAL INFORMATION

The Division of Health Studies offers a five-semester Associate Degree Diagnostic Imaging (RAD) program. Upon satisfactory completion, the Associate of Applied Science Degree is awarded. The Diagnostic Imaging program prepares individuals, under the supervision of physicians, to provide medical imaging services to patients and attending health care professionals. The student will receive training in applied anatomy & physiology, patient positioning, radiographic technique, radiation biology, safety and emergency procedures, equipment operation and maintenance, quality assurance, patient education, and medical imaging/radiologic services management.

NOTICE: The curriculum is continuing to be reviewed and analyzed. Modifications will be made as needed. The most updated information will be found in the College catalog posted on the NW-SCC website.

The College reserves the right to adjust requirements or use additional criteria to determine admission. Admission to the Associate of Applied Science in Diagnostic Imaging is competitive; the number of students is limited by the number of faculty and clinical facilities available. Meeting minimum admission criteria does not guarantee admission into the Program. After meeting all minimum criteria, applicants are ranked using a point system.

The Associate Degree Diagnostic Imaging is developed as a combined sequence of radiography coursework. It is strongly suggested that all general education coursework be completed with a minimum grade of "C" or higher prior to the start of radiography coursework. The general education courses are offered on both the Shoals and Phil Campbell campuses at NW-SCC. Completion of certain courses prior to application results in a higher ranking score and improves the chances of being admitted.
